The Girl Who Received Letters from Tomorrow

Every morning at exactly 7:00 AM, a girl named Meera found a letter outside her bedroom door. The strange thing was that every letter was dated one day in the future.

At first, she thought someone was playing a prank on her. But the letters contained details nobody could possibly know.

One letter warned her not to take the usual bus. That morning, she took a different route and later learned that her regular bus had broken down on the highway.

Another letter told her to call her grandmother. Meera did, only to discover that her grandmother had been waiting all week to hear her voice.

For thirty days, the letters continued. They helped Meera avoid mistakes, repair friendships, and notice the little things she had always ignored.

Then, on the thirty-first morning, she found something different.

There was no letter outside her door. Instead, an envelope lay on her pillow.

Inside was a single sentence:

“Tomorrow, you will meet the person who has been writing these letters.”

Meera barely slept that night.

The next morning, she rushed downstairs and opened the front door. An elderly woman stood outside, holding a familiar notebook.

Meera froze.

The woman had her eyes, her smile, and the same tiny scar above her left eyebrow.

It was Meera herself, but much older.

“How is this possible?” Meera whispered.

The older woman smiled sadly. “I cannot change everything that happens, sweetheart. I can only remind you of what matters before you forget it.”

She handed Meera the notebook.

On its first page were the words:

“You spent your whole life waiting for tomorrow to become happy. Don't make the same mistake I did.”

Meera looked up, but the woman had disappeared.

That morning, Meera did something she had postponed for years. She sat beside her mother, made her favorite tea, and told her everything she had been too afraid to say.

For the first time in a long while, she felt completely present.

And the next morning, at exactly 7:00 AM, another letter appeared.

It contained only five words:

“Good. Now live your life.”